

Contents

Carolingian frontiers: Italy and beyond. An introduction , by Stefano Gasparri	1
Works cited	7
On empires and frontiers , by Francesco Borri	9
1. Brief anatomy of a concept	11
2. Imagining frontiers	13
3. Reaching frontiers	16
4. Ruling frontiers	17
5. Living frontiers	22
6. Imperial awe	24
7. Conclusion	27
Works cited	30
Frontier practices in the early Carolingian Period , by Walter Pohl	37
1. Shifting frontiers, shifting concepts	39
2. The clusae at the Alpine pass roads, Lombards and Franks	44
3. Limes certus and the Carolingian expansions to the east	49
4. Some conclusions	51
Works cited	56

A blurred frontier: the territories between the kingdom of Asturias and al-Andalus (eighth and ninth centuries) , by Iñaki Martín Viso	61
1. The Islamic conquest and its consequences	62
2. The dynamics of a stateless region	63
3. The process of affirmation of Asturian power	70
4. By way of conclusion	74
Works cited	75

I. Italian boundaries I: northern frontiers

Waiting for the barbarians: the frontiers of the Ostrogothic Kingdom during the reign of Theoderic , by Marco Cristini	81
1. Introduction	82
2. The military dimension of Ostrogothic frontiers	83
3. The administrative dimension of Ostrogothic frontiers	87
4. The ideological dimension of Ostrogothic frontiers	89
5. Conclusion	92
Works cited	93

From passageway to frontier: the Alps in Carolingian times , by Katharina Winckler	95
1. Early medieval alpine frontiers before 788	99
2. Early medieval alpine frontiers after 788	101
3. Conclusion	110
Works cited	112

Serving two masters. Istria between Venice and the Franks in the 8th and 9th centuries , by Annamaria Pazienza	115
1. Introduction	116
2. Commonality and hybridization in the Upper Adriatic	117
3. Rethinking the Treaty of Aachen and its local outcomes	120
4. Venetian-Istrian connections	123
5. John who?	126
6. Conclusions	132
Works cited	134

II. The frontiers of others I: Saxony and Lothringia

Frontiers and fortifications in the Carolingian imperial imagination , by Simon MacLean	141
1. Introduction	142
2. Fortifications and frontiers	143
3. Picturing the palace	149

4. The Carolingian imperial imagination	151
5. Conclusion	154
Works cited	157

Frontiers as zones of public overinvestment: fortresses, ditches, and walls in the northern frontier of the Carolingian Empire , by Marco Franzoni	161
1. Saxon and Frankish fortresses	163
2. The Danes and the Danevirke	167
3. Fortresses and control points on the Elbe River	168
4. Overinvestment at the frontier zone	171
Works cited	173

III. Italian boundaries II: southern frontiers

Representing the space of papal government at the time of Lothar I: the claim of fines Romani , by Maddalena Betti	177
1. Introduction	178
2. The Liber pontificalis : the silence after 774	180
3. The life of Paschal I (817-824): the space of the donations	181
4. Sergius II, first and second redaction: the space of invasions (and that of avidity)	184
5. Leo IV (847-855): a territory to be defined	186
6. Conclusions	189
Works cited	191

Border pacts and frontier areas in Carolingian Italy , by Stefano Gasparri	193
1. The legacy of the eighth century	194
2. Arichis' pacts for the Liburia	194
3. Sicard's peace with the Neapolitans	197
4. The division between Benevento and Salerno	198
5. A treaty with ancient roots: Lothar's pact with the Venetians	200
6. Border agreements in early medieval Italy	203
Works cited	205

Cultural boundaries, epigraphic boundaries , by Flavia De Rubeis	207
1. Cultural boundaries, epigraphic boundaries	207
2. Graphic areas and epigraphic boundaries	209
3. Epigraphic landscape	210
4. Venice and its epigraphic landscape	213
5. The Carolingian script in northern Italy	215
6. Venice and its graphic landscape	218
7. The scriptural strategy	221

8. Conclusions	227
Works cited	232

Carolingian koinè and documentary frontiers of the kingdom of Italy,
by Gianmarco De Angelis 235

1. «scriptum est quod partibus Etalie usus capeat»: a Lombard juridical-documentary Province?	236
2. Documentary regions and border porosity	239
3. Mobility of documentary formulas in time and space	248
4. From one kingdom to another	252
Works cited	255

IV. The frontiers of others II: from Catalunya to the Danube

Fiscal resources and political competition on the periphery of the Carolingian empire: some Catalan examples (9th century), by Igor Santos Salazar 261

1. Land, courts and political peripheries: Carolingian conquest and governance	262
2. The quest for fiscal resources: local elites, counts and political competition in the 9 th century	265
3. Conclusion	269
Works cited	271

The Carolingian south-eastern frontier, by Neven Budak 273

1. The establishment of the frontier	274
2. The regna between the Adriatic and the Drava River	275
3. Charlemagne and Hadrian I	277
4. Missionary activities from Aquileia	279
5. The dissolution of the march of Friuli and the emergence of the Croats	281
6. Churches and swords	282
7. Conclusions	284
Works cited	285

Divided by the Danube? Political boundaries and cultural continuities, by David Kalhous 289

1. Introduction: some theoretical remarks	290
2. Materiality and difference	292
3. The Danube in the Annales regni Francorum and their East Frankish continuation	294
4. Practicing differences, practicing inclusion	296
5. Conclusions	301
Works cited	302

Conclusions , by Giuseppe Albertoni	307
1. A question of concepts	308
2. Borders between the Alps, the Adriatic and the Tyrrhenian Sea	309
3. Frontiers, fortifications and the “others”	311
4. Between visible and invisible borders	313
Works cited	316
Index of Persons	317
Index of Place Names and Ethnonyms	323